

SKATING HAS ALWAYS BEEN LIMITED
BY ITS SURFACE.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN YOU REMOVE THAT LIMITATION?

ACT I

DISCOVERY

This isn't the story of a career.

It's the story of discovering a question.

I THOUGHT I KNEW MY FUTURE.

When I became a professional performer at seventeen, I thought I understood where skating could take me.

Like many skaters, I imagined a career performing in ice shows around the world.

In many ways, that is exactly what happened.

But looking back now, I realize something more important was happening.

I wasn't building a career.

I was collecting experiences that would eventually connect in a way I never expected.

FOR
YEARS...

AT THE TIME...

THEY FELT LIKE SEPARATE CHAPTERS.

DIFFERENT WORLDS

More than twenty years in professional ice shows.

Taught me how world-class productions are built.

Six Got Talent shows across five countries.

Taught me that audiences remember contrast.

International corporate performances on inline figure skates.

Taught me adaptability.

DIFFERENT WORLDS

A featured acrobatic inline pair act with Cirque du Soleil.

Taught me creative possibility.

Coaching ice, inline and quad skaters.

Taught me movement.

Developing ice and inline figure skating equipment.

Taught me how technology shapes creativity.

THEN SOMETHING CHANGED.

SKATING HAS ALWAYS BEEN LIMITED
BY ITS SURFACE.

THE MAGIC WASN'T THE ACTS.

IT WAS THE CONTRAST.

WHAT IF THEY WEREN'T SEPARATE ACTS ANYMORE?

ACT II

THE QUESTION

Every breakthrough begins with a better question.

This is that question.

ICE CREATED ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST FORMS OF LIVE ENTERTAINMENT.

BUT IT ALSO CREATED ITS BIGGEST LIMITATION.

A FROZEN SURFACE

For centuries, live skating has depended on a frozen surface.

Without ice, there is no show.

That single requirement has shaped every decision the industry has ever made.

Where shows can exist.

Where audiences can watch.

Where athletes can train.

Where careers can develop.

The surface has always come first.

WHAT IF THE SURFACE WAS NEVER THE POINT?

OFTEN MISUNDERSTOOD

People assume this conversation is about replacing ice.

It isn't.

Ice is extraordinary.

It created Olympic champions. Historic venues. World-famous productions. Generations of unforgettable performers.

None of that changes.

The question isn't whether ice should disappear.

The question is whether live entertainment should always depend on it.

THE WORLD DOESN'T NEED MORE ICE SHOWS.

NOT A REPLACEMENT.

A NEW CATEGORY.

HOW CATEGORIES BEGIN

New entertainment categories don't replace old ones.

They expand what is possible.

Cinema didn't replace theatre.

Television didn't replace cinema.

Each created an entirely new category.

Skating can do the same.

AN IMPORTANT STEP

The industry has tried solving this problem before.

Synthetic ice was an important step.

But it still asked the same question.

How do we recreate ice?

What if that was never the right question?

WHAT IF WE STOPPED TRYING TO RECREATE ICE?

TWO QUESTIONS

The question the industry kept asking:
How do we skate without ice?

The question nobody was asking:
How do we unlock world-class skating without requiring ice at all?

That single change in thinking changes everything.

EVERY INDUSTRY CHANGES
WHEN SOMEONE ASKS A BETTER QUESTION.

WHAT CHANGES

Technology changes.

Audiences change.

Creative ambition changes.

Eventually, someone asks a better question.

And an entirely new form of live entertainment becomes possible.

THE ANSWER WAS NEVER THE SURFACE.

FOR THE FIRST TIME...

THE TECHNOLOGY FINALLY EXISTED.

ACT III

THE TECHNOLOGY

Every breakthrough depends on two things.

A better question.

And the ability to finally answer it.

THE IDEA WAS NEVER IMPOSSIBLE.

THE TECHNOLOGY WAS.

SKATING HAS ALWAYS BEEN LIMITED BY ITS SURFACE.

THIS IS THAT MOMENT.

WHAT WAS MISSING

For decades, inline figure skating existed.

Exceptional performers existed.

Creative choreographers existed.

Visionary coaches existed.

But one essential piece was still missing.

Equipment capable of supporting elite figure skating without asking performers to constantly compromise.

Without that, a new entertainment category could never fully emerge.

THE EQUIPMENT
STOPPED BEING THE LIMITATION.

A DIFFERENT PROBLEM

For years, I wasn't trying to build another frame.

I was trying to solve a different problem.

How do you recreate the feeling of skating?

Not simply the movement.

The confidence.

The edges.

The rhythm.

The balance.

The freedom.

Because when performers stop thinking about
the equipment,

they begin thinking only about the performance.

THE BEST TECHNOLOGY DISAPPEARS.

NOBODY APPLAUDS THE STAGE

They applaud the performance.

The stage simply makes the performance possible.

Technology should work the same way.

When audiences remember the equipment,
the technology has failed.

When audiences remember the performance,
the technology has succeeded.

WHEN THE TOOLS DISAPPEAR...

CREATIVITY EXPANDS.

ONE LESS COMPROMISE

This was never about building better equipment.

It was about removing another creative limitation.

One less compromise.

One less distraction.

One more opportunity for performers to create something audiences have never experienced before.

TECHNOLOGY DOESN'T CHANGE AN INDUSTRY.

PEOPLE DO.

ACT IV

THE MOVEMENT

Every movement begins with people.

THIS WAS NEVER ABOUT INLINE FIGURE SKATING.

IT WAS ALWAYS ABOUT CREATING SOMETHING NEW.

THE STAGE
BECOMES LIMITLESS.

WHERE IT COULD LIVE

Without ice, entirely new possibilities appear.

Historic theatres.

City squares.

Cruise ships.

Theme parks.

Dinner theatres.

Festivals.

Corporate events.

Television.

Arena productions.

Places where skating has never been possible before.

THE WORLD BECOMES THE VENUE.

WHAT IT ADDS

The goal was never to replace existing productions.

The goal was to create opportunities that have never existed.

More performers.

More productions.

More audiences.

More creativity.

More possibilities.

EVERY NEW CATEGORY CREATES NEW CAREERS.

ECOSYSTEMS GROW

New performers.

New directors.

New choreographers.

New coaches.

New creators.

New businesses.

New partnerships.

Entire ecosystems grow when a new category appears.

THIS IS HOW MOVEMENTS BEGIN.

ACT V

THE PRODUCTION

Every great production begins long before the curtain rises.

THE LIGHTS GO DOWN.

BEFORE ANYTHING HAPPENS

The audience doesn't know what to expect.

There is no ice.

No obvious stage for skating.

Only anticipation.

Then the music begins.

MOVEMENT WITHOUT EXPECTATION.

THE FIRST MINUTES

A performer appears.

Then another.

The audience thinks they understand what they're watching.

Then the performance changes.

Dancers join.

A singer enters.

Movement becomes choreography.

Choreography becomes storytelling.

EVERY SCENE BECOMES A SURPRISE.

NO TWO MOMENTS

No two moments feel the same.

A powerful solo.

An intimate duet.

An aerial performance.

An acrobatic sequence.

A skating ensemble.

A theatrical moment.

Every transition changes the energy.

VARIETY BECOMES THE PERFORMANCE.

THE CREATIVE ENGINE

The audience never settles into repetition.

Every new discipline changes the rhythm.

Every performer changes the atmosphere.

Contrast becomes the creative engine.

THIS ISN'T A SKATING SHOW.

IT'S A NEW LIVE EXPERIENCE.

WHAT THEY TAKE HOME

The audience leaves talking about moments.

Not one performer. Not one discipline.

The experience.

The emotion.

The surprise.

The feeling that they witnessed something they had never seen before.

THIS IS WHAT LIVE ENTERTAINMENT CAN BECOME.

ACT VI

THE PEOPLE

No new creative movement is built by one person.

It is built by people who bring different ways of thinking together.

NO ONE BUILDS
THE FUTURE ALONE.

SEVEN KINDS OF KNOWING

Some understand performance.

Some understand storytelling.

Some understand music.

Some understand movement.

Some understand technology.

Some understand production.

Some understand audiences.

Real innovation begins when those worlds finally meet.

EVERY DISCIPLINE MATTERS.

SKATING HAS ALWAYS BEEN LIMITED BY ITS SURFACE.

THE MAGIC ISN'T ONE PERSON.

TRUST IS THE MATERIAL

The greatest productions never happen because one individual has all the answers.

They happen because talented people trust one another enough to create something none of them could have created alone.

EVERY GREAT PRODUCTION IS A COLLABORATION.

WORLDS THAT NEVER MET

For years these creative worlds have existed alongside one another.

Now they have an opportunity to intersect.

Not by replacing what already exists.

By creating something entirely new together.

THIS ISN'T ONE PERSON'S VISION.

IT'S A SHARED FUTURE.

THE NEXT CONNECTION

Every generation creates something the previous generation could not.

Not because people become more creative.

Because more knowledge becomes connected.

Perhaps this is simply the next connection waiting to happen.

THE RIGHT PEOPLE ALREADY EXIST.

PERHAPS

They have simply never been invited into the same conversation before.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN THEY FINALLY ARE?

ACT VII

THE INVITATION

Every new era begins with a conversation.

EVERYTHING BEGINS THE SAME WAY.

Every great creative movement begins the same way.

Someone asks a different question.

Someone imagines a different future.

Someone chooses to build it.

Eventually, others join.

PERMISSION HAS NEVER BEEN REQUIRED.

EVERY REALITY WAS ONCE AN IDEA.

Every category that exists today once existed only as an idea.

Every industry.

Every performance.

Every innovation.

Someone chose to begin before the rest of the world understood.

MAYBE THIS IS ONE OF THOSE MOMENTS.

HISTORY DECIDES.

History decides which ideas matter.

Not the day they're imagined.

The day someone builds them.

THE ONLY WAY TO FIND OUT IS TO BEGIN.

NOT ONE OF ANYTHING

The future of skating entertainment won't be created by one production.

Or one company.

Or one breakthrough.

It will be created through thousands of conversations.

Thousands of collaborations.

Thousands of creative decisions.

That is how every new era begins.

IF THIS IDEA STAYED WITH YOU...

THEN...

Let's begin the conversation.

THE STAGE IS READY.

THE PEOPLE ARE READY.

NOW...

LET'S SEE WHAT WE CREATE TOGETHER.

THE FUTURE
DOESN'T ARRIVE.
IT'S CREATED.
